The twelfth year of the Third Millennium was full of significant human rights related incidents. Crises and developments such as the making of the blasphemous film insulting the Prophet of Islam which is a blatant indication of adding fuel to the fire of religious intolerance, the killing of the American Ambassador to Libya in Benghazi which is an indication of diplomatic insecurity, the assassinations of two Iranian physics scientists, the Syrian crisis which still continues and has claimed countless number of civilian lives, the continuation of the popular protests in Bahrain and the crackdowns, Israel’s 8 Day war against Gaza which took over 160 Palestinian lives, the Sandy Hook Elementary School massacre that took the lives of 20 children and six adults, which led to public opinion’s criticism of the current US gun ownership law, terrorist actions in Afghanistan, Pakistan and Iraq, and the killing of Muslims in Myanmar, all indicate 2012 was a very volatile year.

In the same year we also bore witness to the continuation of ethnic and religious conflicts in line with the objectives of world political powers, continuation and escalation of sanctions against Iran which have resulted in the blatant violation of human rights in the field of medicine, food and air travel safety, development and also human rights campaigns.

In this year also Iranian human rights issues were extensively debated inside and outside the country. Existing approaches and differences that mostly are due to the use of double standards which have come about over the years, indicate the necessity to make the viewpoints of both sides more balanced and realistic.

In the year that passed, the ODVV arranged its activities in line with its strategy which is based on the creation of a balanced atmosphere among domestic decision makers, and the making the views of the foreign addressees more balanced and realistic. To this aim, the ODVV’s activities included the holding of education workshops, commemoration of international days, continuous interactive meetings with governmental and nongovernmental organizations to influence the decision making process, and participation in international events and conferences, and meetings with human rights thematic special rapporteurs.

Although this matter is a difficult objective and efforts to fulfill them are exhaustive, nonetheless this organization shall continue on these issues unabated.

The ODVV believes that the peak of an NGO effectiveness is its effective presence in specialized decision making processes. The prevention of one wrong decision from being made, and or provision of assistance and strengthening of the decision makers in making a right decision, is one of the best and most effective work that an NGO can do.

We hope that in 2013 the campaigns of the ODVV and all human rights NGOs and activists around the world will result in the reduction of human rights violations and promotion of the dignity of mankind regardless of colour, race and belief. What follows in the next pages is a comprehensive and brief reflection of ODVV’s activities in 2012.

Participation in Exhibits

- ODVV’s Achievements on Refugees Issues Exhibit

Since participation and interaction as principles of the moral pledge of the ODVV has always been centre of attention, we have tried to have highlighted presences in participatory activities. The holding and participation in various exhibits as one of the arenas of participation, gives each organization a very good opportunity to provide information dissemination on its objectives, activities and programmes, and also have the opportunity to interact and establish links with other governmental and nongovernmental organizations. For this reason the ODVV has included in its activities the participation in exhibits, and the participation in the exhibit on the services the Islamic Republic of Iran has provided to the refugees can be seen as one of them. One of the accomplishments of the ODVV in this exhibit was the documentaries made on the Strengthening of the Family Institution and Prevention of GBV Project (Afghan refugees in Semnan refugee camp – Autumn 2011) and the Community Awareness Raising for the Prevention of GBV (Afghan refugees in Shahr-e-Rey – 2010)
